★ HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP ★

Guy Madison Wins Fame as Cover Boy

While at least a sizeable portion of Hollywood's glamour girls have appeared on magazine covers, Guy Madison can claim to be one of the few male stars who attracted Hollywood attention as a magazine "cover boy."

The star of "The Charge at Feather River" was first seen as a screen possibility when a Hollywood talent scout spotted his dial in a Navy publication. It was during the war years, when sailor Guy was temporarily stationed in San Diego.

His picture interested the talent agent sufficiently to explore Guy's possibilities as an actor, and before long, the sailor was in front of the cameras.

Final scenes for "Born to Ski," Technicolor short on the life of Olympic ski champion Andrea Mead Lawrence, have reached Warner Bros. from Sun Valley, where she competed in the Harriman Cup races. Marvin Miller will do the narration.

Mrs. Lawrence won the Slalom and Giant Slalom at the 1952 winter Olympics in Switzerland, thus becoming the first American of either sex to garner two gold medals in this event.

Actor Resumes Career After 12-year Absence

Five years as a prisoner of war and seven years of recovery have left Evan Royce exactly twelve years behind in the acting career he started simultaneously with the outbreak of World War II.

Royce is playing one of Errol Flynn's Scottish companions in "The Master of Ballantrae," Technicolor production of the Robert Louis Stevenson classic.

When Royce was captured by the Nazis at Calais in 1940, he weighed 172 pounds. When he reached England five years later he weighed 70 pounds. "I didn't lose it from worry, either," he said. "It was simply lack of nourishment for five years."

Since his recovery from the mental and physical shock of the five years' captivity, Royce has just resumed his acting career, and is beginning to get some film roles.

"I won't feel that I'm completely back to where I started until I can weigh in at 172 pounds again," he said. "I'm still about six short of that mark."

Film Title Inspires New Line to Lingerie

Arlene Dahl, who is something of a lingerie tycooness as well as a movie star, has whipped up a chiffon confection in nightgowns that she calls the Diamond Queen.

Inspiration for the name admittedly came from "The Diamond Queen," in which she stars with Fernando Lamas and Gilbert Roland.

In the picture, the beautiful red-headed Arlene plays an Oriental empress with more diamonds than Tiffany's.

Movie's Newest Recruit From Contest Winners

Vera Miles, the shapely young woman who slinks out of a Cheyenne tepee to make love to Guy Madison in "The Charge at Feather River," true 3-D Natural Vision picture, is Hollywood's newest recruit from the contest-winner field.

Like many of her sister-stars, Miss Miles came to the attention of the screen as a runner-up in a recent Miss America beauty contest.

Joan Rice, who stars with Burt Lancaster in "His Majesty O'Keefe," won a beauty contest sponsored by a chain of London restaurants, and was thus launched on a film career.

Also Vanessa Brown, Donna Reed, Esther Williams and Ava Gardner are former contest winners. So, too, are Joan Crawford and Ginger Rogers, who won their first notices when they carried away dancing cups.

The 3-D "The Charge at Feather River," stars Guy Madison and Frank Lovejoy. Gordon Douglas directed.

18th Century Arsenal Amassed by Warners

An eighteenth century arsenal, the likes of which has never been seen outside of a museum, has been amassed for use in "The Master of Ballantrae," Technicolor adventure drama starring Errol Flynn.

Studio representatives scouted for weeks in search of authentic weapons of the period. And they came up with claymores, flintlocks and even four Lochaber axes in their collection of nearly 700 weapons.

Flynn himself fights with a Scottish broadsword almost 200 years old.

Argentine Adonis

The muscular Fernando Lamas, who stars in "The Diamond Queen" was born in Buenos Aires and played his first stage role at the age of six.

Sheldon Leonard 3-Media Actor

Sheldon Leonard's name may not be a household word but his voice is readily recognized in every home where there's a radio or TV.

Leonard, whose latest picture role is as the Great Mogul in "The Diamond Queen," is a regular on the airwave shows of Jack Benny, Phil Harris, Bob Hope and Judy Canova.

With Benny he's a racing tout; with Hope, a gangster; with Harris he's Grogan, and with Miss Canova, he plays her boy friend.

As an Oriental ogre in the adventure color drama starring Fernando Lamas, Arlene Dahl and Gilbert Roland, the versatile Leonard plays it strictly for villainy.

Flynn Plans Expedition Into Remote Hadramaut

Errol Flynn is planning an expedition to Hadramaut, a remote section of southeast Arabia, almost entirely unexplored.

Flynn, who has been practically every place else in the world, is attempting to set up an archaeological research project in the area, and is seeking British government approval for the trip. Evidences of a lost race have been discovered there.

The actor, now starring in "The Master of Ballantrae," recently conferred with Mrs. de Sturler Raemaekers, the first white woman ever to enter Hadramaut.

"I think it was her diet of dried shark and rice that first interested me in the idea," Flynn said.

Outsy-Doorsy Day

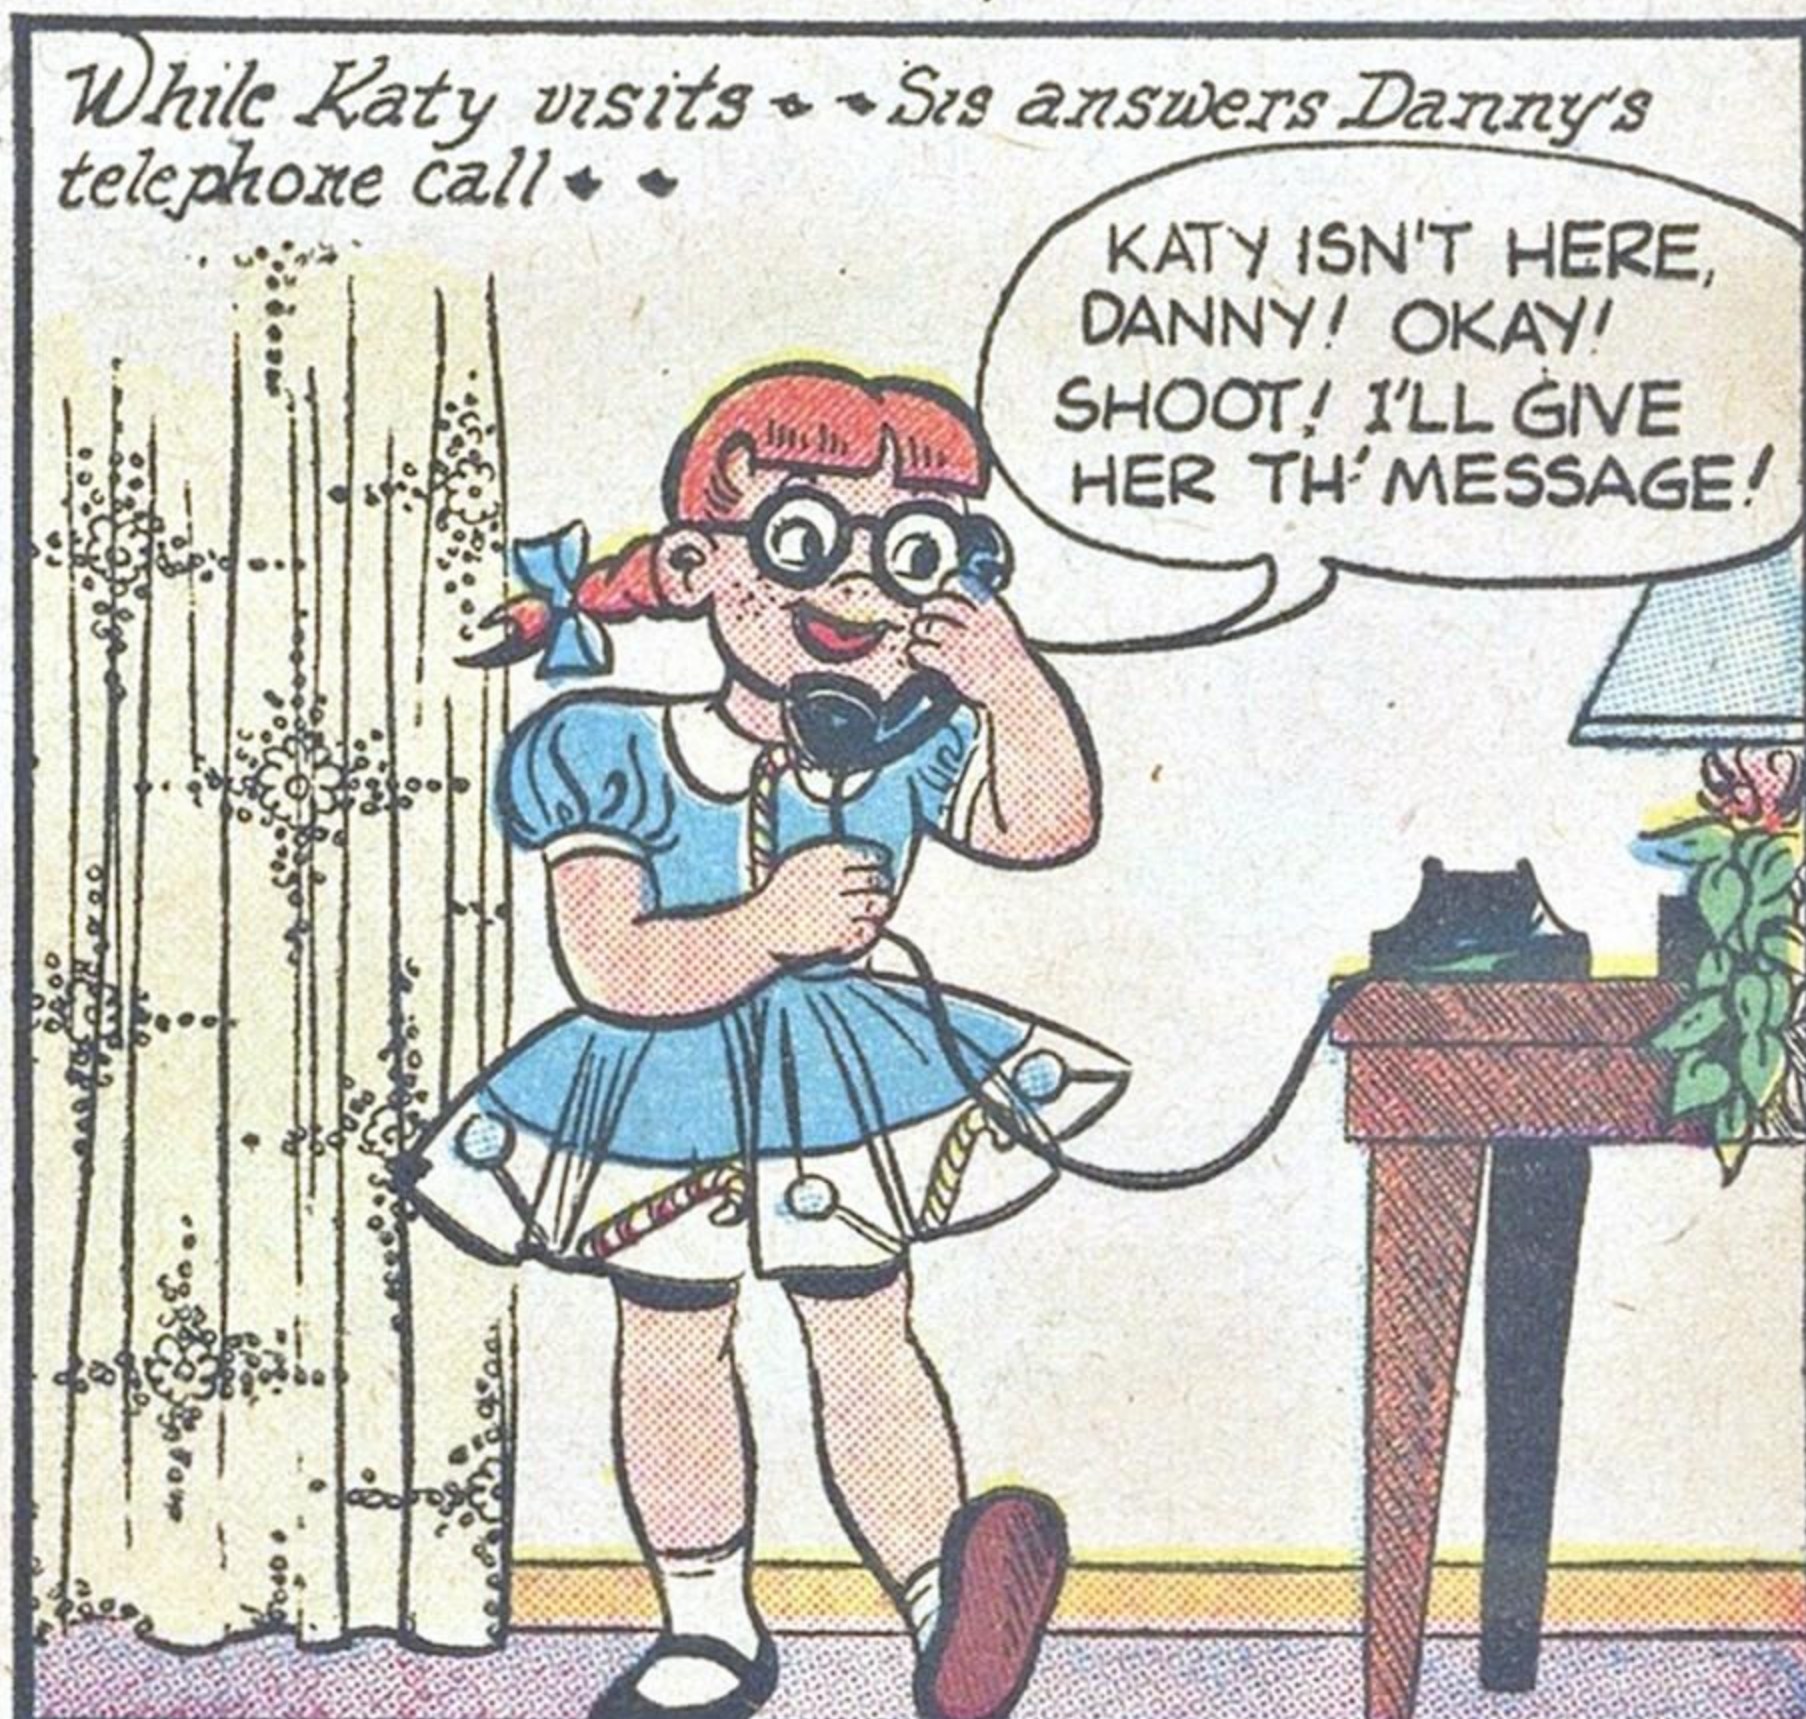

Doris Day escapes the heat of humid California summer nights by sleeping outdoors. Doris, next to be seen in Technicolor "Calamity Jane," sleeps in a hammock tied between two trees in her garden.
